There are however, legal limitations to confidentiality and you need to know that your personal information can be disclosed without your consent under the following circumstances:

1. In some circumstances it is our duty to share information to protect the health, safety and well being of our clients and others. If a client expresses an intention to harm himself/herself or someone else, or if there is reason to believe such harm may occur, there may arise a duty to disclose that information. For example:
   - We must, by law, disclose any information regarding the neglect or abuse if the child is still under 19 and/or the perpetrator is still in contact with other children
   - We may notify the police or superintendent if a client appears unfit to operate a motor vehicle and we have reason to believe that the client intends to do so upon leaving the agency
   - Client information may be released when responding to a medical emergency. Addiction service providers may contact a family member or friend if a client is seriously ill, injured or deceased, and their assistance is required
2. If a law, statute or regulation requires the disclosure of information, we are compelled as a public body to disclose the information requested. For example:
   - The Young Offenders Act contains several provisions under which the disclosure of information may be required
   - The Child, Family and Community Service Act requires staff to comply with requests for specific information from child protection workers
   - The Health Act Communicable Disease Regulation requires us to report communicable diseases to the appropriate medical health officer
   - The Medical Practitioners Act requires us to make relevant patient files available to the College of Physicians and Surgeons to assist in the investigation of the skill and knowledge of a physician
   - The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act contains a number of provisions permitting the disclosure of information that is in the custody and/or control of a public body.
3. If we are served with a valid subpoena, court order or search warrant, we must comply with the disclosure of the requested information.
4. Government funded programs may in some circumstances exchange your personal information as permitted by Section 33 of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, as long as it is for the purpose for which it was obtained or compiled or for a use consistent with that purpose.
5. As Turning Point is funded in part through the Ministry of Health, information will be provided to Addiction Services within the Health Authority for quality assurance purposes, as well as to develop service planning strategies province wide. This information will form a central database compiled for statistical; and decision making purposes in general, and not for the purpose of collecting information on any individual client. Client inclusion in the database will not threaten their confidentiality, as access to the database will be restricted to authorized personnel.
